The car racing event ‘Supra SaeIndia’, meant for engineering college students will be held in Chennai next year. The event, organised by Society of Automotive Engineers (SAEINDIA) in association with the Automotive Research Association of India (ARAI) was announced on Tuesday. Participants of the competition need to conceive, design, fabricate and drive their own cars on a tar track.

“The competition is similar to Baja SaeIndia. The only major difference is that Supra is held on a tar track, while Baja is on dirt track and the maximum speed for Supra will be more than 100 kilometres per hour, while that for Baja is 60 kilometres per hour,” said K C Vora, head of ARAI Academy.

ARAI along with Society of Automotive Engineers (SaeIndia) have organised the competition for SAE student members who is an undergraduate or postgraduate engineering student in India. Participants must be at least 18 years and must possess a permanent driving licence.

The competition will be held from July 1-3 next year. “Participants are given a year’s time to design, construct and test their cars.”

The specifications of the car frame and engine are restricted so that the knowledge, creativity and imagination of the students are challenged,” Vora said.

Arvind Pangaonkar, general manager, TVS Motors and MV Shet, chief manager - brand management & CMS (Retail Brand), BPCL, launched the competition at ARAI on Tuesday. Raymond Banajee, J K Tyres National Road Racing champion of 2006 was the guest of honour. Prof Sadhir Gupte, head of the automobile engineering department of A D Patel Institute of Technology, Gujarat, will be the convener of the Supra SaeIndia event.

“This is a unique event as it not only provides aspiring engineers with a platform to highlight their design and engineering potential, but also gives them the opportunity to develop marketing and entrepreneurial skills,” said RR Sankaranabramanian, executive director of SaeIndia.

Of the three-day Supra SaeIndia schedule, the first day will have static events like engineering design report, engineering design evaluation, marketing presentation and cost analysis. The second day will have dynamic events like acceleration, skid pad test, and day 3 will see durability events like fuel economy and endurance.

These will be judged by a panel of eminent personalities from the automotive and motorsport field. Those interested must register online on www.suprasaeindia.com before April 31. The team should consist of 5 to 25 members. The competition will be held at Madras Motor Sports Club (MMSC), Chennai.

Website for motor design-racing meet launched at ARAI

Pune: Society of Automotive Engineers (SAEINDIA), in association with Automotive Research Association of India (ARAI), will organise SUPRA SAEINDIA, an automotive design and racing competition on July 1-3, 2011 at Chennai. The website of the event www.suprasaeindia.org was launched in Pune at ARAI.

The participating teams will be asked to design, fabricate and put to race, their ideas of automotive models. Details about rules and registration process have been given on the website. ARAI is a co-operative industrial research association involved in design, development and evaluation of all types of IC engines.
Competition for students to build Formula-type cars

TIMES NEWS NETWORK

Pune: The Society of Automotive Engineers (Sae), India, in association with the Automotive Research Association of India (ARAI) launched the Supra Sae India 2011 competition on Tuesday. The competition involves designing, modelling and fabrication of Formula-type racing cars by undergraduate and post-graduate engineering students.

The competition is scheduled between July 1 and 3, 2011, and will be held at Madras Motors race track in Chennai. More than 50 engineering colleges from across the country are expected to participate in this competition; registration for which will begin from March 24 and end on April 30.

The competition will be held from July 1 to 3 at the Madras Motors race track in Chennai. More than 50 engineering colleges from across the country will participate. The cars will be built with a team effort over a period of one year and will be taken to the annual competition in July 2011, for judging and comparison. Over three days, events like engineering design report, marketing presentation, cost analysis, acceleration, skid-pad test, autocross, fuel economy and endurance will be conducted.

These events will be judged by a panel of eminent personalities from the automotive and motorsport field.

On the occasion, the website of the Supra Sae India 2011 was also launched by Arvind Panagariya, general manager, TVS Motors. National road racing champion 2006, Rayomand Bajaj, was also present during the occasion.

Participants can register their teams on the site www.supraeaseindia.org.
